REPORTS

The Chin-Chin a Hambury schooner Whampos was firing a salute the other day. when from the vent being improperly served. the man loading was blown overboard. The remains much disfigured have been recovered.

To The Editor of the "Daily Press"

Sir.—I would call your attention to a danzer Northward of the Lammocks Islands on which the British barque Bride of the Seas struck May 80th. 1864 on her passage from Shanghai to Swatow Draft of water-14 feet. The Rock bears N. W. I N. one mile from the North Rocks of the Lammocks: the above position cannot be far from right as I had good cross bearings of North Rocks and High Lammock a few minutes after striking. have no doubt but the above is the Rock marked doubtful on Admiralty Chart, Sheet III of China Coast, Collinsons Survey; and which has been successfuly searched for by H. M. S. Plover and others. There can be no doubt of its existance as on docking in the Amoy Dock I find the fore foot entirely gone. If you will publish the above you will confer a favour on vessels navigating that part of the China Coast.

Yours Respectfully. WM. DONALD. MASTER. Bride of the Seas.

REPORTS

The Chin-Chin a Hamburg schooner Whampoa was firing a salute the other day when from the vent being improperly served, the man loading was blown overboard. The remains much disfigured have been recovered.

To The Editor of the "Daily Press" Sir.-I would call your attention to a danger Northward of the Lammocks Islands on which the British barque Bride of the Seas struck May 30th, 1864 on her passage from Shanghai to Swatow Draft of water-14 feet. The Rock bears N. W. 1 N. one mile from the North Rocks of the Lammocks; the above position cannot be far from right as I had good cross bearings of North Rocks and High Lammock a few minutes after striking. have no doubt but the above is the Rock marked doubtful on Admiralty Chart, Sheet III of China Coast, Collinsons Survey; and which has been successfuly searched for by H. M. S. Plover and others. There can be no doubt of its existance as on docking in the Amoy Dock I find the fore foot entirely gone. If you will publish the above you will confer a favour on vessels navigating that part of the EXTRCTS. The Campaign in America. The campaign which has probably by this time opened in Virginia is the most critical since the commencement of the war. After numerous efforts in various directions, it has been conclusively preved that until the army of the Confederates i Virginia is defeated it is vain to expect the suppression of the rebellion. In order to conquer a powerful antagonist his great armies must be defeated, and it is certain that the Confederate army in Virginia is now the most formidable body of troops in the field. During last summer and autumr the great efforts of the Federals were di- ready suffered severely by the system which hasrected to the West. The Mississippi was cleared by the surrender of Vicksburg and the whole troller of the Navy, and we are glad to find that of Tennassee was secured by the capture of Chat- it has now broken down. The gentlemen who tanoogs and Knoxville. The seahoard now hold the appointments of chief and other claims attention. The possession of Mobile would draughtsmen at Whitehall possess no ordinary cut off the Confederates in the South from all amount of talent. They have pursued their access with the outer world, and if the chief ports avocations under great difficulties, and we are on the castern seabord should fall into the hands | quite sure that they will rejoice as much as any of the Federals, the cause of the Confederacy would be reduced to no ordinary straits. Wilminton and Savannah are the ports by which the Confederacy practically communicates with other conntries and obtains many of the necessary supplies for carrying on the war. Let the Confederacy he deprived of these ports, and it will find considerable difficulty in maintaining its military position It is not to be denied that during the present veer the Federals have met with no sort of success. The expedition of Sherman effected nothing ; whilst the Confederate officer, Forrest. has captured an earthwork (Fort Pillow) on the eastern banks of the Mississippi, and threatens to penetrate even into Ohio. It may be reasonably conjectured that the Federals, having a great enterprise in hand in the East, have weakned their armies in the West as much possible; and this may account for the late successes in that quarter. Unless Gen. Lee has a sufficient number of troops to resist the attacks of Gen. Grant in Virginia and in North Carolina, the brilliant exploits of Gen. Forrest will only prove that the Confederates did not understand their business. For it will appear that when the Confederates ought to have been concentrated they were dispersed-when they ought to have been in the East they were in the West. If the great attack upon Richmond specseds, the pedatory operations of Forrest and his mounted infantry will be utterly futile. In the meantime, however, they may cause much priate loss and misery, and perhaps convince the farmers of the West that they have no hope of 10 Frames SHEATHING FELT, ex " Young permanent tranquillity until the South is subdued. But the Confederates have not been satisfied with operating on the eastern bank of the Great River. They are operating on the westen bank. It is difficult to believe that the success either of the North or of the South in these regions can materially affect the result of the war. No doubt, if the Federals should succeed at Richmond, their occupation of the country West of the Mississippi would facilitate their again obtaining poss- PLIANCES, of every description. ession of that region. On the other hand, the would lead to the same result. It is by no Ton & BARNITT, London. mains clear, therefore, that the Federals will really obtain any benefit by prosecuting the was on the West of the Mississippi. Indeed, the only benefit which can be derived from such an enterprise is the employment of a certain number of Confederate troops, which if they were not so employed would swell the Confederate armies in the East, and the only possible defence of the Federale is, that they are employing men who could not possibly be employed elsewhere. The state of things on the Red River is somewhat doubtful. It may be observed that this river, descending from the north-west, debouches on the western bank of the Mississippi about 200 miles from New Orleans. It was on the $th April that Banks, after a consultation with Sherman, started upon his expedition up the Red River. The point which he intended to reach was Shreveport. He had. therefore, to traverse a distance of about 300 of England," expected to arrive at Hongkong miles, passing through Alexandria and Natubitoches. The region was fertile in cotton and other products. During the siege of Vicksburg the garrison of that stronghold had been supplied from this fertile district, and Shreveport, which is about 200 miles directly westward, had been the deput, of such supplies. In the opinion of Gen. Bunks is was important that Shreveport should be destraved, and therefore, as has been mentioned, he started upon his enterprise on the 10th March. The number of troops under his command is not mentional, but he had the assistance of the fleet On the 16 th the army had reached Alexandria. on the right or western bank of the river, on the 21 st they had reached Na chitodhes. There they secm to have rested. But on the 6 th April they advanced to Pleasant Hill, on their way to Shreveport. By this time the Confederates had concentrated all their forces. When, therefore, the Federals moved on the 8th April, their advanced guard was met by overwhelming numbers and repelsed with serious loss. It is now said that the Li first quality and different sizes and patterns. hattle was renewed the next day, and that the Best FRENCH REVOLVERS, by LEFACE. Confederates were defeated and routed with great | with Unrividges, sold with the original invoice of slaughter. The only fact which throws any the Maker. doubt upon this report is, that whilst the defeat. Do. REVOLVERS with BOWIE-KNIFE atof Banks is confirmed by intelligence from New tuched, new invention. Orleans of the 16th April, no mention is made of his victory on the day following. But, whatever may be the truth of these events, they cannot materially affect the campaign in Virginia. It is not to be supposed that the particular plan adopted by Grant should be known to the public. But it is tolerably clear that that officer has determined to make a grand effort to overcome the Confoderate armies in Virginia. There seems no reason to doubt that Grant has been really placed in supreme command of the United States armies. Since the beginning of the war no officer has shown himself more thoroughly independent than Grant. It is impossible to prove that his own plan has heen adopted; but he has reorgaised the army of the Potomac in a fashion which, until the present moment, has not been experienced. He has rearranged brigades and divisions, dismissed some officers, and placed others in new commands. Above all, he has succeeded in getting the whole of the Northern armies under his control. A vigorous attack upon the Confederate armies in Virginia is the one object at which Grant aims. and it is clear that he has been allowed by the Government at Washington to use the whole resources of the Republic to accomplish his design. Areophanes, Hend Dresses, Nets, Belts, Gloves It is admitted that the army on the Rapidan has Handkerchiefs trimmed with real lace. Hats heen reorganised according to the general's own Wreaths. Falls, and a general assortment of Habheart. But besides this be has employed himself in directing every man who could be spared, from Washington down to Florida, to concentrate upon Richmond. The army under Sherman at Chattanooga and at Knoxville is quiescent-a canstant -a constant stream of troops has been pouring nto Fort Monroe on the north side of the James ! River, and, according to the latest accounts, large numbers are being transported from Port Royal." in the immediate neighbourhood of Savannah, to the same rendezvous-another army s assembling on the south side of the James River, whilst Grant himself is said to be watching the movements of Lee with 110,000 efficient troops. Thus from three points-north, east, and southresist the attack of Ge. Loc. are about to advance upon Richmond. Their communications with Washington and with each other by see are ample. The only danger is that the Confederate officers may succeed in amphilating one of them before either of the others can some to its aid. To avoid this catastrophe will test the capacity of the Commander-in-Chief. M'Clellan failed in his campaign in a great measure because he was not entrusted with the supreme authority; although it may be doubted whether, even if his authority had been enlarged, he would have succeeded. But Grant has no such excuse. He occupies the position, and is clothen with the substantial authority of a Commander-in-Chief, If, therefore, he fails.

New line of steamers to India. It is intended to build five first-class transport ships, to be employed in the conveyance of troops between the mother country and the Empire of India. Two are to be employed in conveying the soldiers from England to Egypt, and three will be occupied in performing the work on the other side of the Isthmus. The Council of India will provide the necessary funds, and the Admiralty will undertake to superintend the construction of the vessels, all of which are, we understand, to be built by contract. It is, we believe, first intended to commence building only two of these ships, the rest following in due course. We are informed that the Admiralty, acting under the suggestion which Mr. Laird, M.P., threw out in a late debate. have called upon some of the most eminent private building firms in London and in the provinces to send in designs for these transports, Duc de Montebello. Such being the case, we would propose, as the draughtsmen of the Admiralty are also to prepare plans, that those which are to be called for from cut of doors should be kept scaled until those prepared in the office are ready, and that they should then be submitted under a letter, or other distinguishing mark, to some unbiassed persons. or to the Secretary of State for India, who, with his professional advisers, would perhaps be the best qualified to select those most suitable to the required purpose. If the advice which was tendered to the Admiralty by the builders of the Orontes had been attended to, this vesse would have been far more successful than she has hitherto proved to be. It can be easily understood that the skill of a naval architect has not fair play, it it is to be restrained by cramped directions. The public service has alhitherto prevailed in the department of the Con one else if they are permitted to follow the dictates of their own judgment rather than be bound down by restrictions which have their origin in the brains of men who, however excellent as naval officers or civil administrators, could have no pretensions to be considered in the light-of shipbuilders .- Army and Navy Gazette.
